11. The railroad changed the way Americans viewed time. Before, most people used the sun to set their clocks. Because the sun appears to move across the sky from east to west, a city a little to the east of a neighboring town marked noon a few minutes earlier. In the early days of the railroad, each city and each railroad had its own time. The main terminal in Buffalo, New York, had four clocks—one for each railroad using the train station and one on “Buffalo time.” In 1883, an association of railroad managers ended the confusion with Standard Railway Time. They divided the nation into time zones, and every community within a time zone was on the same time. An Indianapolis newspaper noted, “The sun is no longer the boss. People—55 million people—must now eat, sleep, and work, as well as travel by railroad time.” In 1918, Standard Railway Time became federal law.

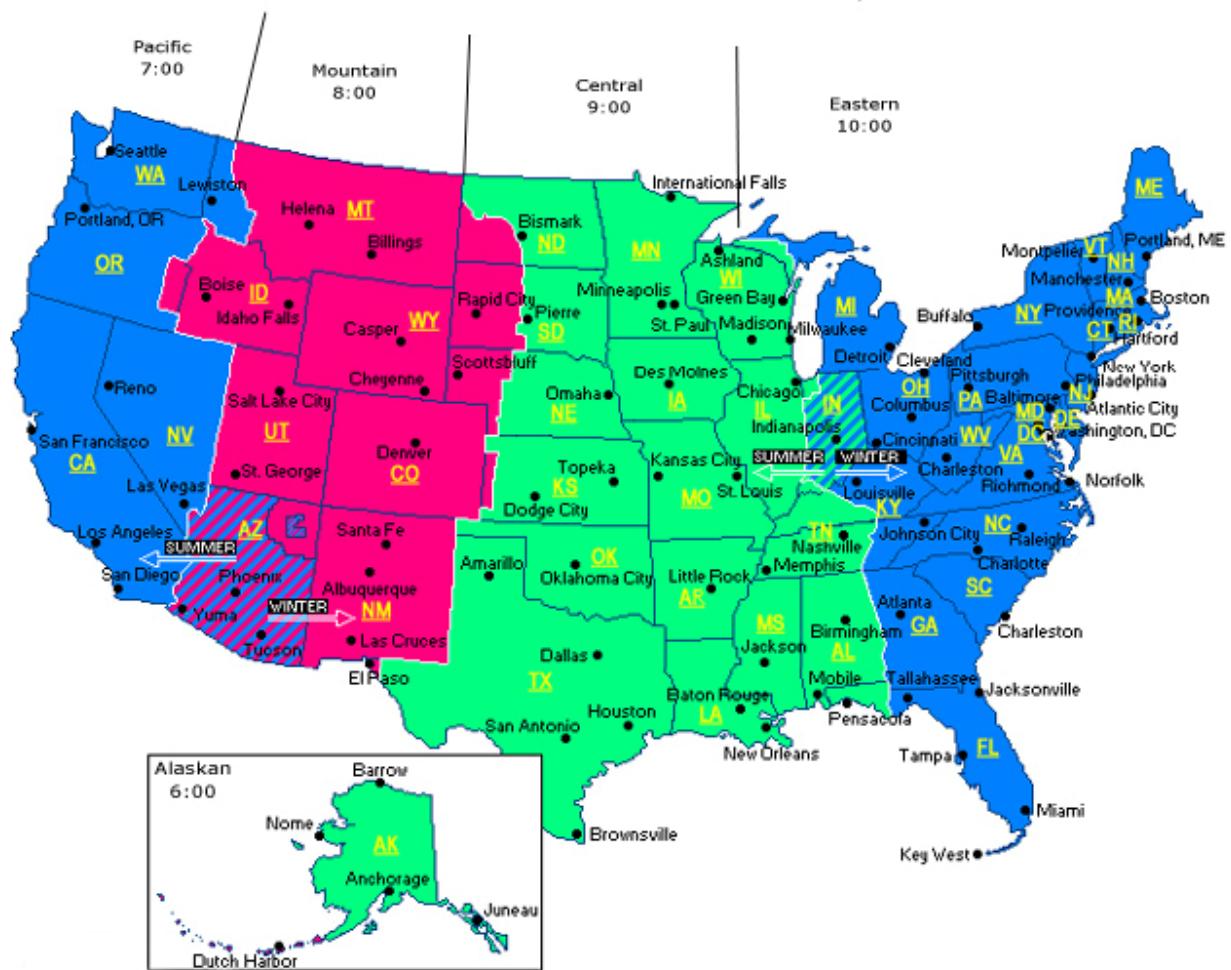

Which of the following was NOT an effect of the establishment of Standard Railway Time?

- a. Trains began to run on time

From 2000 B.C. until the twentieth century, a succession of dynasties ruled China. The word China comes from the Ch'in Dynasty (221-206 B.C.), which first unified the country by conquering warring land-owning feudal lords. King Cheng names himself Shih Huang-ti, or first emperor, and consolidated his empire by abolishing feudal rule, creating a centralized monarchy, establishing a system of laws and a common written language, and building roads and canals to the capital. Scholars speculate that construction of the Great Wall or chang cheng, meaning "long wall," began during the Ch'in Dynasty in order to protect China's northern border from invaders. Shih Huang-ti ruled with absolute power, imposing strict laws and heavy taxes and doling out harsh punishments. He also is reputed to have burned books on topics that he did not consider useful like agriculture or medicine. Shih Huang-ti died in 210 B.C. His son succeeded him, but soon peasants and former nobles revolted and overthrew the dynasty. The Han Dynasty replaced it, ruling China until 220 A.D.

When people make economic decisions, they must often give up something; for example, they give up taking a vacation in order to save for a car. The value of the thing given up is called opportunity cost. In another example, Ana is trying to decide whether to take a part-time night job that $200 a week or take courses for credit at the local community college. Her uncle will pay for her tuition and books if she decides to go to college. In addition, he will give her $100 per week. (for questions 21-22)

21. What is Ana's opportunity cost of going to college?

- a. $100 per week
- b. college credits
- c. the $200-per-week job
- d. payment for tuition and books
- e. working too slowly toward her degree

22. Why does Ana's decision involve opportunity cost?

- a. she doesn't want her uncle to pay her college costs.
- b. she wants both to work and go to school.
- c. her resources (her uncle's money) are endless, so she can choose to take classes.
- d. her resources (time and money) are limited, so she must make a choice.
- e. she would rather go to college than work at night.

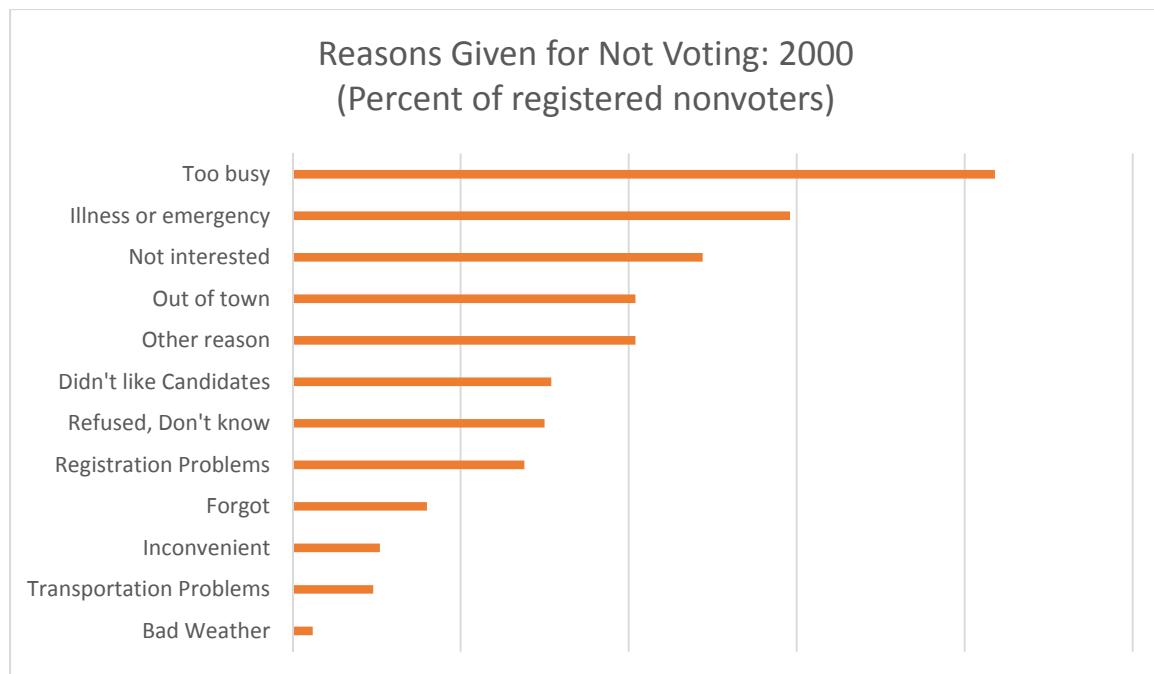

23. Capital gains taxes money paid to the federal government out of profits from the sale of financial assets, like property (land or buildings) or stocks. For which of the following would you need to pay capital gains tax?

- a. cigarettes
- b. groceries
- c. your mortgage

- e. a profitable real estate sale

24. In order for a bill to become a law in the United States, it must be passed in identical form by both the House of Representatives and the Senate and signed by the president. If the president vetoes the bill instead of signing it, the bill can still become law if two thirds of each house of Congress approves the bill in anew vote, overriding the president's veto. If the president neither signs nor vetoes a bill passed by Congress, the bill becomes law ten days later, unless Congress is no longer in session. If Congress has adjourned, the unsigned bill does not become law; this is known as a pocket veto.

Which statement best summarizes the previous passage?

- a. The president plays the key role in passing a new law.
- b. The president has the power to block Congress from passing a law.
- c. The president, by simply not signing a law, can keep it from taking effect.
- d. The veto power gives the president the ability to rewrite bills passed by Congress before signing them.
- e. The president can sometimes check the power of Congress to pass new laws.

25. Based on the information in the graph, which of the following proposals might best improve the voting rate?

- Distribute umbrellas to all household members to encourage people to vote on rainy days.
- Organize buses to help people get voting places.
- Send reminders to registered voters so they do not forget to vote.
- Reschedule Election Day to a weekend so that people who are busy at work and at school can be available to vote.
- Provide more interesting candidates that inspire people to vote.
